HELMONT ENERGY AGAIN SIGNALS INTEREST IN MILL Key February meeting to determine future

David Gardner Journalist MOSSMAN Mill and its associated companies could soon either be shut down by creditors or, under a bold new proposal outlined just days ago, make renewable diesel fuel - with the State government potentially to become a main supporter.

Welcome to Newsport in print TODAY marks a new era for Newsport following the first edition of Newsport print which will complement Newsport online.

We feel the time is right to create a new, small newspaper for the Douglas Shire that is completely local - by name and by content.

BUSINESSES in Mossman face a long and painful wait before they know whether insurance claims submitted after Cyclone Jasper flooding will be paid or rejected.

The all-clear for payment of some business insurance claims which resulted from the flood devastated Mossman CBD are largely dependent on reports by hydrologists who visited the town on behalf of insurance companies more than a week ago.

directly from the Mossman River - or stormwater (rain water) from the rainstorm immediately following Jasper, could make or break the future of some businesses.

Scott Young has taught English, Maths, and Agriculture for more than 18 years and recently decided to contact a host of Port Douglas resorts and hotels to see if they'd each be kind enough to donate items that he could later distribute to a range of First Nation families in Mossman who could benefit from such generosity.

Mossman Mill has a new, bioenergy-focused future under a new proposal to ensure its survival. Picture: Far Northern Milling government support is being offered by Helmont Energy in offering that so-called 'gap' funding - is that the state government also provides funding and becomes a long-term buyer of the bio-product's future products, including renewable diesel, or 'r-diesel', and sustainable aviation fuel (SAF).

Council and Federal MP Warren Entsch. Less sugar, more renewable fuels. In the introduction to the save the Mill proposal, the meeting heard that the 2023 sugarcane season had been extremely tough for the whole of Queensland - it was a short season, with particularly challenging weather conditions, and as a result volumes and sugar contents are down dramatically.

Michael Warren Editor A LONG term familiar face at Mossman High School has once again exemplified the generous nature of Douglas Shire residents after coming up with a way to deliver much needed items to those in need during the school's member's coffee and food events.

Reader questions water consumption accuracy Dear Editor, I AM confused by Mayor Michael Kerr's statement in an ABC News report yesterday.

David Gardner Journalist WONGA Beach residents who've been reminiscing about an old 'pub' in their suburb years ago may soon have reason for a big 'cheers' with plans for a long-term business to include a new bar - with public access.
